1. INTRODUCTION

1.1. Information about CAMP Kuhiston

CAMP (Central Asian Mountain Partnership) Kuhiston is a local Tajik NGO. It was originally established by the University of Bern, Switzerland who withdrew its technical and financial support at the end of 2007. Since then, CAMP Kuhiston has been striving to establish itself as a sustainable and effective local NGO. Jointly with its partner organizations in Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan CAMP Kuhiston forms the CAMP Network.

The overall goal of CAMP Kuhiston is to contribute to improvement of people's livelihoods in mountain villages of Tajikistan by encouraging a more sustainable way to use of natural resources.

CAMP Kuhiston pursues a trans-disciplinary and multi-stakeholder approach based on local, regional and international partnership and experiences. CAMP Kuhiston develops, adapts and implements innovations, simple and effective technologies with an emphasis on awareness and involvement of villagers, local institutions, partner organizations and experts.

1.2. Context

CAMP Kuhiston supports sustainable and multifunctional use of natural and human resources by implementing various projects. These projects are finely tuned to the changing socio-economic and ecological requirements of Tajikistan's mountain regions.

CAMP Kuhiston focuses its work on the specific conditions of living in as well as developing mountain regions and the highland-lowland interaction, giving priority to active and innovative partners.

The main activity of the CAMP Kuhiston is - to strengthen the dialogue between different groups of stakeholders at different levels.

The idea of an open dialogue CAMP is to bring together all relevant stakeholders in a forum to express different points of view. This will help create a common respect and trust, which allows solving problems together.

2. ORGANISATION OF COMPETITION

Today, many people agree that the search for solutions of environmental problems can and should become a factor that unites society. Environmental problems concern everyone because we all live in one world and breathe the same air. To improve the environment, sustainable development of society requires the public dialogue. And the media are the main tool of this dialogue. Consequently, one of the goals of environmental journalism - to promote social integration, and hence the solution of environmental problems through the publication of balanced, scientifically sound and correct materials

2.1 Goal and objectives

In 2012 the world will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the UN Conference on Environment and Development, held in the Brazilian city of Rio de Janeiro. The forthcoming conference on sustainable development for the next 20 years, has already received the code name "Rio +20". Some of the problems that are bound to be affected at this summit, nowadays are not discussing by experts and scientists, but also by journalists of all countries. Nowadays, the world faces new challenges. Already today, climate change impacts are felt in all corners of the planet. All this lead to an increase of social problems and limits the possibilities for further development.

Competition "ECO HOUSE 2011" supports public debate about the rise of the negative impact on the environment, depletion of natural resources, the imbalance of the biosphere and the impact of climate change in Central Asia.

Objectives of the project:

- Building effective communication with journalists and media covering the theme of ecology.
- Increase motivation of journalists and media to a deep and comprehensive coverage of current issues in the field of ecology.
- Increase attention and loyalty of regional and local authorities to journalists and media covering the topic of ecology.
- Identification, synthesis, and promote the best samples of journalistic work.

2.2 Organizing Committee

CAMP Kuhiston was the main organizer of the competition in Tajikistan. However, in order to ensure the highest professionalism, the Organizing Committee was created, which included representatives of the Jury: government officials, representatives of environmental organizations, educators and journalists.

Preparation to the Competition

The competition consisted of several stages of work:

- Development of provisions of the Competition "Eco House 2011"
- Advertisement about the launch of the competition, its objectives in media
- Collection of entries from the competition. Correspondence with the participants (the answers to the institutional questions)

- Translation of contest entries from Tajik into Russian
- Placement of entries on the blog (<http://rio20-articles.blogspot.com/search/label/>)
- Presentation and selection of the best work by members of the Jury
- The award ceremony

2.3 Participants, Target group, Language

The competition attracted participants not only from different parts of Tajikistan (Sughd, Gorno-Badakhshan Autonomous Region), but also participants from Russia and Spain.

The event included: representatives from all levels of government, international and local organizations involved in development, scientific institutions, media and the public. As expected, the project was attended by various stakeholders in the sustainable development of mountain regions of Tajikistan:

- Those responsible for policy and government representatives at various levels - government officials (radio interviews, comments in media)
- Academics (radio interviews, commentary in the print media, and members of the Jury)
- Professionals of organizations for development, representatives of the local and international non-governmental organizations (the jury)
- Representatives of the media (the participants and jury member of the Russian Federation)
- Residents of Tajikistan (dial on the radio listeners' Sadoi Dushanbe ", feedback "to the email of the Competition)

Work for the competition were made in two languages: Russian and Tajik (official).

Ms. Roziya Alieva, Director of CAMP Kuhiston greeted the finalists. She presented the project which aimed to raise awareness of population "Public attention to the process of Rio +20." In particular, in her speech Roziya said: "The society has collected a huge number of problems related to environmental conditions that require rapid solutions. In this situation the media is a major source of environmental information for most citizens. Today, they determine how people will relate to the environment depends on the level of ecological awareness in society.

There are very few main stream journalists constantly writing on the topic of environmental protection in the Republic, except for those who work in the media of environmental NGOs. Therefore, we hope that the environmental theme will be interested theme for all of you, and you will take part in our future projects, because the media performs not only informational function, they also serve as educational and awareness raising. We hope that next year ecological competition "Eco House 2011" will continue. We are looking forward to your support information. We hope that in the competition will be interested not only local organizations, but also commercial organizations to maintain the financial side to join us. And now the most solemn part: we want to thank everyone who took part in the competition. The jury allocated the most interesting work. We did not divide the contest works on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd place, but divided the 5 final works on the nomination and want to present the Diploma with gifts".

5. RESULTS

5.1. Proposals

- It should strengthen the capacity of journalists in understanding the issues of climate change impacts and adaptation through training in small-scale projects (specific environmental journalism in today's world, efficiency eco materials, the media's role in the prevention of disasters, environmental issues, access to environmental information).

- The costs of organizing and conducting the competition shall be under the equity of its founders. Attracting sponsors, from both environmental organizations and commercial entities.

- Be sure to include traveling expenses of the winners in the budget, as the national competition, so journalists can participate from all regions of Tajikistan.

5.2 Public Relations

Information campaign - included a set of measures aimed at attracting public attention to the subject matter claimed in the project, and involving potential participants in the project activities. The media are characterized by: an appeal to a mass audience and accessibility to public dissemination of this information. Advertising in newspapers, Internet portals and broadcast radio, identify the required e-mail and link blog as well as important in the project, was in a "feedback" with all stakeholders in the discussion of the themes of the Project, and to give an opportunity to the public to express their views on environmental issues. Thus, Table 4 shows the number of media, where the information about the Project was settled, and the underlying data for feedback. In addition, the public radio "Sadoi Dushanbe" was an "open broadcast", where callers could give the audience their assessment of what is happening, as well as give advice and express suggestions on improving the environment, "green economy" and the "Millenium Development Goals".

6. FEEDBACK

"In our editorial decision to take part in the competition came as something at once. Frankly, we have not anticipated any prizes. I just wanted to support the initiative of organizing such events. We think it is very important that the professional community aware of such projects. I believe that this initiative must be continued in the future. Such competitions provide an excellent opportunity for skeptics to take a fresh look at environmental issues and ways out of all this "routine" (participant of the competition)

"I want to thank the organizers of the competition, as these activities help to direct the" minds "in the right direction, but also make the company look at a new angle on environmental issues, using "green" technology. I hope that the competition "Eco House-2011" will become an annual event, and the new interesting projects will be launched" (representative of the environmental organization, Tajikistan)

"I want to highlight the exceptional professionalism and the highest quality in the preparation and conduction of the competition by the organizers (a lot of information about the upcoming competition can be read in many media), objectivity and impartiality of the jury, the high level of participants and presented their work. There were not enough in the completion ceremony. It would be nice if the outcome of such an event solemnly brought into the hall with a lot of interested people! And, in general, such competition - is the right thing "(finalist of "Eco House-2011")

"I wish the organizers of the competition a future development and further success in carrying out such extremely useful and necessary for society events as well as new members and interesting projects in the field of "green economy" (Jury member).

7. SUMMARY

In the future, Competition should "grow" into the Festival, which will be open to all sectors of society (in the appropriate categories): children, journalists, photographers and those who care about the future. And summing up we can be timed to one of the proposed dates, depending on the nomination competition. For example: March 20 - Earth Day, 15 May - International Day of Climate, 5 June - World Environment Day, Week in September - Global Action "clear the planet of garbage," 11 December - International Mountain Day.

1) The protection of the environment is solved most successfully with the participation of all concerned citizens. At the national level, every citizen shall have appropriate access to information relating to the environment held by public bodies, including the opportunity to participate in decision-making citizens of Tajikistan.

2) Society has a huge number of problems related to environmental conditions that require rapid solutions. In this situation, the media is a major source of environmental information for most citizens. Today, they determine how people will relate to the environment, depends on the level of ecological awareness in society. Media performs not only informational function, it also serves as educational and awareness raising among population.

4) In the modern world, the global environmental crisis is no less important than political and economic crisis, it can be argued that the basic knowledge of the laws of nature, the functioning of the ecosystem of industrial pollution, the impact of various chemicals on human health is important for every person in society.

5) A journalist is always able to submit information to the readers. He finds some interesting, vivid detail and makes it to the title, structurally separates news from analysis , chooses the most suitable genre, makes information accessible to the uninitiated to understand the problem and so on. That's why it's important to attract journalists' attention to such competition as the mass media can turn to the public.
